Robertsons won't move back to city

'I am sad that I had to leave'

By Jack C. Ventimiglia
Staff writer

ST. LOUIS — The Robertson family will not return to Granite City, Tammy Robertson announced at a press conference Monday.

"I am sad that I had to leave my hometown," she said.

Tammy Robertson, 29, said a community has been found that offers an accepting school district, church and neighborhood for Jason Robertson, 7, who has AIDS-related complex. She declined to name the community, saying the family does not want further publicity.

The Robertsons left their Ohio Street home Aug. 10 following weeks of threats by telephone and an assault Aug. 6, on Tammy Robertson. She said the man who struck her forehead with a night stick objected that Jason Robertson was to return to Prather Elementary School on Aug. 25.

Not everyone in the Robertsons' new community knows they are there and Tammy Robertson said the family expects that Jason Robertson eventually will be recognized. However, she said her family has strong support to deal with any problems.

Assisting the Robertsons with the relocation are Madison County AIDS Interfaith Response, consisting of ministers and lay people, primarily from Madison County, the St. Louis Effort for AIDS, St. Louis Interfaith Task WON'T RETURN: The Rev. George Humbert, a member of Madison County AIDS Interfaith Response, joins Tammy Robertson, 29, in a press conference Monday to announce the Robertsons will not return to Granite City. The family has been threatened by city residents since May when a court ruled Jason Robertson, 7, who has AIDS-related complex, could attend Prather Elementary School with other students.

Force, the Public War on AIDS Endowment; Athletics and Entertainment for Kids; Sen. Ted Kennedy; and Sen. Paul Simon.

Tammy Robertson said the protesters in Granite City did not drive the family from town. "We beat (School) District 9 and the protesters once and we would do it again if necessary," she said.

The reason given by Tammy Robertson for relocating was that her family needed to live in a more supportive environment.

Although saying protesters and the court fight against District 9 to get her son in school made Granite City appear backward, she said some people helped her family.

"I think the vocal minority ruled in Granite City," she said. "There are some good people in Granite City, such as the mayor (Von Dee Cruse) and State Rep. Sam Wolf, but a lot of the time we saw the dark side."

Jason Robertson and his sister, Melissa, 10, should start school in three or four weeks, Tammy Robertson said.

On May 5, at the close of Jason Robertson's first day at Prather Elementary School, he was surrounded by children who shielded him from protesters.

"That is my greatest regret," Tammy Robertson said, "that Granite City could not see this situation through the eyes of its children."

All's quiet on Ohio Ave.

By Paul Guggina

GRANITE CITY — Children played tag in the long grass in front of Prather Elementary School late Monday afternoon, seemingly oblivious to the heat that kept most Ohio Avenue residents inside.

Half a block away, within earshot of the children's shouts, weeds grew long in the front yard of a small, weather-beaten house. A Big Wheel lay tipped on its side at the end of the gravel driveway. A small bicycle leaned against the porch post.

The family that lived there, the Robertsons, moved away quietly on the night of Aug. 10 to an undisclosed location.

Tammy Robertson and her children, Missy and Jason, left Granite City because, they said, their lives had been threatened by people who did not want Jason, 7, who has AIDS-related complex, to return to Prather this fall.

Most of the Robertsons' neighbors on Ohio Street closed their doors to a reporter in search of opinions Monday.

Maggie Rigby, who lives on Ohio Avenue, near the intersection with West 24th Street, was one of a few who were willing to talk. Rigby stood on the steps of her trailer while her young granddaughter played nearby.

"If they want to leave, that's fine. If they want to come back, that's fine too," Rigby said.

She said that's what she'd told TV news crews from each of the local networks.

Gov. says he won't be V.P.

NEW ORLEANS — Gov. James R. Thompson arrived here saying he is not interested in being the GOP's vice president.

"I said no, I don't want to be considered and I think (Vice President George Bush) understood," Thompson said during a press conference in his hometown New Orleans hotel.

Thompson, who on Friday took himself out of the sweepstakes to run with Bush, was among a handful of prominent Republicans who were asked to supply the Bush campaign with financial and biographical details.

"All they did was send me some forms to fill out," the governor said. "I still have the forms and I'm not interested."

In his remarks Friday, Thompson said his main reason for removing his name was based on family commitments. Although he stressed his decision was final, Thompson didn't issue a blanket refusal Sunday that would rule himself out even in the now unlikely event Bush would tap him for the GOP ticket.

"Well, let's wait for that to happen before we worry about it," Thompson said.

Thompson's name surfaced not only because he's acquired a national reputation since heading to Springfield but also because his state's 24 Electoral College votes rank it the top five states in a contest where the candidate with 270 votes wins the White House.

Other governors who have figured as Bush's top choices include California Gov. George Deukmejian and former Pennsylvania Gov. Richard Thornburgh, recently confirmed as the new attorney general, succeeding Edwin Meese.

Asked what Bush had to do to put Illinois in the Republican column 1988 as President Reagan did in 1980 and 1984, Thompson said Bush was a conservative who had to instill in voters a sense of national momentum in the next four years.

"Illinois is a microcosm of the nation," Thompson said. "Illinois will need to be convinced that George Bush represents the best hope for change ... the best hope for progress."

Few Illinois delegates were surprised at the apparent end of Thompson's vice presidential hopes.

Thomas Long, a Bush delegate from Godfrey, said Thompson would have made an ideal running mate but the governor's absence won't harm Bush's chances in Illinois.

"Certainly Governor Thompson would have been high on my list. I know he is committed to winning Illinois for George Bush," said Long, one of 22 Illinois Republican delegates.

Don Weber, a Bush delegate from Edwardsville, said Thompson was a "great guy."

Motorcyclist killed

PONTON BEACH — A collision with an automobile killed a Granite City man Sunday.

Michael Edward Focht, 23, 2821 Myrtle Ave., was pronounced dead on arrival at 6:36 p.m. at Anderson Hospital, Maryville.

The accident happened at about 5:30 p.m. in front of the Holiday Mobile Home Park on Horseshoe Lake Road. Focht was westbound on his mid-size Honda when he collided with a car driven by Mary Durand, 63, a resident of Holliho who was turning into the park from the east.

Police Sgt. Dan McKinney said Focht's brother, Joe, 22, witnessed the accident. Joe Focht was riding on another motorcycle with a friend, Amber Neely.

McKinney said Joe Focht and Mary Durand gave different accounts of how the accident happened. He said state police will reconstruct the accident to learn how it happened.

Durand was not injured, McKinney said, nor was her blind husband, who was riding with her.

An autopsy on Focht was being conducted Tuesday.

Arson suspected in Venice fire

VENICE — A state fire marshal said a fire at 122 Abbott St. early Aug. 10 was started with gasoline, according to Police Chief Farris Smith. The vacant house was destroyed.

A witness told police he had seen three persons running from the fire. A short time later police stopped a car carrying two men and a juvenile boy at Fourth Street and Broadway.

Police found a nearly empty gasoline can in the trunk of the car. The car had been borrowed from a Venice woman, who told police the car was not hers.

Police also found 13 stalks of what was believed to be cannabis, along with a bag containing a leafy substance, also believed to be cannabis.

The men were booked on suspicion of possession of cannabis and later released, pending laboratory results. The boy, 16, was turned over to juvenile authorities.

Police are investigating the case for a term, who told sufficient evidence exists to bring charges of arson against the two men. Two small fires were extinguished at the Abbott Street address July 15 and 16, police said.

Several vacant garages have also burned in recent weeks, and Smith said they are believed to have been the result of arson.

"We've got some people that we suspect," Smith said.

Reviews and previews

Costello sworn in as congressman

Jerry Costello, D-Belleville, resigned his position Thursday morning as St. Clair County Board chairman and was later sworn in as a congressman in Washington, D.C. Costello narrowly defeated Republican Robert Gaffner of Greenville in the Aug. 9 special general election to fill the unexpired term of the late 21st District Rep. Melvin Price.

School board selects negotiators

The District 9 Board of Education has selected members Jylene Terrell and Roy Kobner for the committee that will negotiate a new teachers contract, beginning this summer. Granite City Federation of Teachers Local 743 had planned to file a grievance alleging that by not appointing members to the negotiating team, the board violated the two-year contract that expired Aug. 14.

Old Newsboys take requests

Agencies that aid children and wish to be considered for funding from the 1988 Old Newsboys Day drive should contact the Suburban Journals to obtain an application. The deadline for applications is Aug. 26. Agencies wishing to apply should send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Old Newsboys Fund Application, Suburban Journals, 1714 Deer Tracks Trail, St. Louis, Mo. 63131.

Granite City's four bookmaking establishments, which had been taking bets while ostensibly closed, received a final warning from the police department Monday and are now reported shut down tight.

Tip of the hat

Althea Cross

One who excels

A tip of the hat to Althea Cross, who retired after teaching for 39 years in the Venice School District. In 1986, she received the Excellence in Teaching Award from Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville. In 1984, she was selected as one of Illinois' master teachers. "Students have worth and dignity as individuals. This fact was uppermost in my mind as I began my teaching career," Cross said.

Quote of the week

"We were disappointed in the turnout; there's no question about that ... We had a lot of Democrats who told me, 'Jerry, you'll have no problem.' Many of those people stayed home," said Jerry Costello after his narrow win in the 21st District congressional race. Costello had projected a landslide victory.

Tell it like it is

Q: Do you think color should be allowed to be added to classic black and white movies like "Casablanca?"

Venida McCart

"I do not think they should be colorized because it seems to take away from the picture. They (actors) all look like they died. The women all look terrible. If they were supposed to be in color, they would have been in color. They are taking away from good movies, and I think it's terrible. I'm watching one right now and the color is bad, very bad."

—East 27th Street

Don Stevanus

"I don't like it. It's ('Casablanca') a classic, and I think it should be left in black and white."

District baseball title won by Legion team

To the editor:

On behalf of American Legion Post 113 and its members I thank the Press-Record-Journal and Dave Whaley for their fine coverage of the American Legion baseball season just concluded.

I also thank the young men who, as members of the Triplets, provided the opposition with many surprises—not many of which were pleasant—by finishing second in the North Division with 14 wins and 6 losses, winning the North

Division playoffs and defeating a fine Smithton team for the 22nd District championship.

It was an excellent performance. Congratulations.

Last, but certainly not least, I thank Manager Ralph Burnett and Coaches Tom Hennrich and "Woody" Moad for giving up most of their summer to help lead the team. Without people like them, there would be no American Legion baseball.

Hopes 911 plan is put on fall ballot

To the editor:

The 911 Emergency System was the major topic of conversation at the July 20 meeting of the Southwestern Illinois Law Enforcement Commission (SILEC) in Belleville.

The discussion was led by St. Clair County Sheriff Meard Justice and SILEC Executive Director Matt Melucci, who for some months have been attending meetings and studying the 911 concept.

The commission voted unanimously to endorse the 911 system for the seven-county region.

Having been active in the SILEC organization for a number of years, serving three terms as president and several years on the executive board, I know the organization does not make endorsements frivolously. SILEC is firm in its conviction that 911 is an emergency system that our area should have.

As a Madison County Board member, I am convinced that a referendum should be placed on the Nov.-2 ballot to coincide with neighboring St. Clair County. Time is important. I urge fellow committee members to meet soon and send a positive recommendation to the Madison County Board.

To get the subject on the November ballot the County Board must act by Sept. 2. Therefore, unless the board holds a special meeting, any action taken would have to be at the next regular board meeting in the middle of August.

The City of Edwardsville and the City of Highland, as well as parts if not all of St. Louis County, already have the system in use.

St. Clair County has been studying the system for several months and is sold on it.

Some believe 911 will be nationwide within a few years. I hope that Madison County will be one of the leaders in this endeavor.

I urge leaders of our area to make every effort to get this matter before the public as soon as possible.

Voters should reject convention call, Edgar says

By Jim Edgar
Secretary of state

As secretary of state, I am required to ask the Illinois electorate in November whether it wants to call a state constitutional convention. Fortunately, I am not required to endorse such a call.

A convention is not needed, and it would prove far too costly. Our current state constitution, ratified by voters in 1970, is working well.

It makes no sense, in these days of beefy demands on a skeletal state treasury, to spend millions of dollars to revise a fundamentally sound document.

Like some who advocate a convention, I favor reforms. For instance, we should amend the constitution to provide for merit selection of judges. That significant change would enhance the quality and integrity of the state's judiciary. But it, as well as other worthy amendments, can be enacted without a costly and possibly chaotic convention. Our 17-year-old constitution offers orderly, effective and relatively inexpensive alternatives: The General Assembly can submit proposed amendments for voter ratification in general elections.

Moreover, under narrow circumstances, citizens can put a proposition on the ballot via the petition route. In fact, voters in general elections have approved four amendments to the 1970 Constitution—including a citizen initiative to reduce the size of the Illinois House by one-third and to change the method of electing state representatives.

Thus, constitutional reformers can pursue their agendas by marshaling public support and vigorously lobbying members of the General Assembly to submit proposed changes to the electorate. If the public is sufficiently aroused, the Legislature likely will listen.

If legislators turn a deaf ear, they risk abbreviation of their political careers by disappointed constituents.

That, after all, is the essence of representative democracy, the deliberative system of decision-making that was so sensitively crafted by the framers of both the federal and state constitutions.

To be sure, framers of the 1970 Illinois Constitution also provided that voters should be given the opportunity at least every 20 years to call a convention.

But the situation is far different today than it was in 1968, when the electorate was last asked whether a convention should be called and rightly responded in the affirmative.

The state was struggling in those days with a constitution that had been written in 1870 and was difficult to amend. It was a horse-and-buggy document that clearly grounded Illinois during the Space Age.

Among other things, local officials were denied the flexibility to implement local solutions to local problems. Mayors and community leaders had to go to Springfield hat-in-hand for permission to address pressing problems.

The 1970 Constitution has proven considerably easier to amend. It is certainly not antiquated. There is not in 1988, as there was in 1968, a clear and convincing need for overhaul.

Proponents of calling a convention argue that we must restore public faith in our judiciary, that we must strive for excellence in education, that we must promote a high standard of conduct for Illinois' elected officials. I strongly agree. But a constitutional convention is not a required remedy.

If Illinoisans truly want merit selection of judges, they can achieve it by demanding it from their representatives in Springfield.

If they truly desire excellence in education, they can help the leadership of our state make some important decisions. And with or without a constitutional convention, they can and should hold all of us in public office accountable for our conduct.

Why spend millions? Why risk the possibility that a convention could turn into a brawl of single-issue zealots from the left and the right?

Why invite distraction and delay at a time when our people and their leaders should be addressing major challenges? Can Illinois really move ahead while it awaits a potentially massive revision of its constitution?

I trust that the people, when fully informed, will vote against calling an unnecessary and expensive convention. I trust that they will help those of us who are responsible to them make surgical, sensible changes in a relatively young constitution that was written for our times.

Stay cool, drink lots of water, juice to avoid becoming heat-wave victim

By Bernard J. Turnock
M.D., director, Illinois
Department of Public Health

As the record-breaking heat wave continues its hold on Illinois and other midwestern states, it seems appropriate to repeat advice issued earlier this summer on how to help prevent serious heat-related health problems.

There are four basic things to remember:

1. Spend as much time as possible in air-conditioned places.
2. Drink lots of water and fruit drinks.
3. Decrease, or postpone, strenuous outdoor activities.
4. Know when to seek medical attention.

First, spend as much time as possible in air-conditioned places. If your home is air-conditioned, stay indoors more than you normally would.

If you do not have air conditioning at home, spend as much time as you can in places like supermarkets, shopping malls or movie theaters.

A recent study conducted by the Federal Centers for Disease Control found that heatstroke rarely occurs among those who live in homes that are air-conditioned 24 hours a day during hot weather.

The study also showed that spending even three or four hours a day in an air-conditioned place reduces the risk of heatstroke, whether the home is air-conditioned or not. This refutes the popular idea that persons who spend a few hours in air conditioning are more vulnerable to the heat when they leave the air-conditioned home or office.

If air conditioning is not available, fans may help, but only as long as the temperature is lower than 95 degrees to 100 degrees. When it's hotter than 95 degrees, fans are not recommended.

As the temperature rises, air flow from the fans becomes less and less effective in cooling the body. Finally, when the temperature reaches about 100 degrees, the air movement created by the fan actually increases heat stress. In other words, in extreme heat, using fans will not protect you from heatstroke.

Second, increase your fluid intake during hot weather. Drink more water and fruit juices or fruit-based drinks such as lemonade.

Avoid beverages that contain alcohol or caffeine (tea, coffee, soft drinks) as they often act as mild diuretics and increase the loss of body fluids.

And don't just drink when you feel thirsty. It may take as much as 50 percent more fluid than the amount dictated by thirst to replace body fluids lost through perspiration.

The only exceptions, of course, are those who are on medical treatment that requires restricted fluid consumption. Such patients should seek advice from their physicians.

Third, decrease or postpone strenuous activity as much as possible. Yard work, jogging, bicycling, athletics, walking the dog and similar activities should be conducted in the early morning or evening hours when it's cooler outdoors.

Those who must work outdoors should take frequent breaks in the shade or coolest available place, and have ample supplies of water or fruit drinks readily available.

Finally, if you are in the heat — indoors or out — and you begin to feel ill in any way, go to the coolest nearby place and sit or lie down.

If your symptoms do not abate within a few minutes, or if they become more severe, get medical attention immediately.

Symptoms of heat distress can include severe headache, dizziness, nausea, light-headedness or disorientation.

Since the risk of heatstroke increases with age, special attention should be paid to the elderly.

If you have older friends, relatives or neighbors who live alone, call or check on them once or twice a day to be certain they are not suffering heat-related illness.

Students 'dig' Mounds

By Scott Cousins
Staff affiliate

Although students participating in a summer dig at the Cahokia Mounds Historic Site did not uncover anything other than a few shards of pottery and some dark patches of soil, George Holley is satisfied.

Holley, laboratory director for the Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville contract archaeology program, was in charge of the three-week dig, located near the base of one of the Twin Mounds in the southern part of the historic site.

The program is sponsored by SIUE and the Cahokia Mounds Museum Society.

Holley said the group, composed of 27 students and supervisors between the ages of 17-20, was successful in locating the palisade which once surrounded the prehistoric Indian city.

Although many of the students were local residents, some came from as far away as Iowa and Florida to participate.

A 1983 dig in the same area had uncovered part of the palisade's perimeter. It was built by Mississippian Indians who lived in the area from about 900 to 1500 A.D., Holley said.

They were hunters and farmers, with smaller towns throughout the region, he said.

The palisade, according to Holley, was made of 12-foot wooden stakes. It was several miles long and surrounded the inner part of the city, including the Twin Mounds and Monks Mound. At the time the stockade was constructed, the city had a population of 10,000-20,000.

"We're trying to fill in the gaps," he said.

At the beginning of the dig, Holley said, he and the other supervisors showed the class how to dig properly and then watched the students closely to make sure they remembered. "You can't dig a hole," Holley said. "You have to intelligently dig a hole."

"Archaeology is destructive," he added. "And we like to keep that destruction at a minimum."

Because most of the area had been farmed before it was purchased by the state, the students were able to practice on the first 12 inches of soil.

Holley said the class was looking for other patches of soil, which indicate a hole dug for one of the stockade's posts. The group worked in three trenches, the deepest reaching about five feet.

Between six and eight people worked in each hole. The number was kept down, he said, because "with too many people, it is harder to concentrate, and injuries can result."

In addition to the dark spots, some pieces of pottery were found. But because fewer people lived in that particular portion of the Indian town, Holley said, only a few pieces were discovered.

He said the stockade was built between 1100 and 1250 A.D. and was obviously for defensive purposes. "They had bastions (which he compared to turrets in a castle) at regular intervals," he said.

"The bastions were placed about 50 feet apart, and protected guards who could shoot arrows at anybody trying to attack the city."

He added that although the entire palisade was rebuilt three or four times, it appears that a successful attack was never mounted.

"We haven't found any evidence of the palisade being burned," he said.

Building and rebuilding the palisade was "quite an undertaking" for the Indians, who would have had to carry the logs used from the bluffs several miles away. He said the construction would have also created other problems.

"It would have been a heavy drain on their wood source," he said. "And sitting down those trees could have created heavy runoff which could have flooded a larger area than what the Mississippi River did flood."

Holley noted that the palisade was first constructed at about the time the Mississippian Indian culture started to go into a decline.

The population of the city had begun to decrease, and natural resources were becoming scarce.

"The stockade also gives us evidence that they had reason to fear someone," he said.

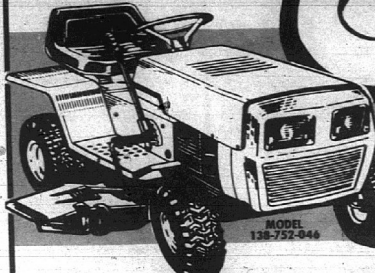

"We're not sure whether the warfare was external or internal, but it's quite likely that both occurred," he added.

Holley said the trenches at the site will be refilled, but eventually the state will reconstruct the palisade.

Council hears Moss' request on easement

By Andy Siering
Staff writer

MADISON — The City Council voted Tuesday to refer to the Zoning Board for its consideration a request from the Madison City Development Co. Inc.

The firm wants the city to vacate the municipal easement around the company's rental housing development at Market Street and Washington Avenue. Such easements are normally retained by municipalities for the construction of sidewalks, it was explained.

The action came after the reading of a letter requesting the vacating of the easement.

Gerald Moss, secretary-treasurer of Madison City Development, said the company wished to erect a security fence around the site.

The letter said granting the company's request would "save the city maintenance expense as well as the possibility of liability."

cost of city insurance, in case a resident would be injured on the property.

On July 25, Moss and another man were charged with intimidation and unlawful use of a weapon in an incident involving a loaded firearm near the housing development.

Alderman Norris Horton, in whose ward the property lies, and Mayor John Bellico both expressed their approval of the request, pending the Zoning Board's action. A public hearing will be held.

In other action, the council voted to advertise for bids on a new street sweeper and a stump puller for the Department of Streets and approved a police department request to spend about $2,460 for four new walkie-talkie radio units.

Bellico told the council he was reappointing Bruce Trotter as head of the Board of Police and Fire Commissioners.

Boy studies at McKendree

Kevin Clark, who will be entering the fifth grade at Maryville School, attended the fifth annual McKendree College Summer Challenge Program.

While there, Kevin stayed in Baker Hall. He learned about electronics by developing a sound-operated robot. He studied solar energy and math skills beyond the regular classroom level, learned about the solar system and studied how to use writing skills through keeping a journal and writing short stories and poems.

Kevin also studied map-making skills. During the class he had to draw a map of the college. In a scavenger hunt, he placed third.

Out-of-class activities included a pizza party, Isaac Newton night, recreation night, crazy night, and "dictionary night."

Hazardous materials lab slated

CHAMPAIGN — State officials have broken ground for a new $8.7 million Hazardous Materials Lab.

The lab, being constructed at a site located on the southwest corner of the University of Illinois Urbana-Champaign campus, will be one of the facilities in Illinois designed specifically for the chemical characterization and research of hazardous waste.

"When completed in 1990, this facility, with its nearly 52,000 square feet of laboratory and office space, will provide state, industry and university researchers with new laboratories equipped with state-of-the-art analytical and safety equipment," said Gary J. Skolen, executive director of the Capital Development Board (CDB). CDB is the construction management arm of state government.

The Hazardous Materials Lab will provide researchers with large pilot and treatability labs for developing and testing new waste management technologies, as well as specialized labs for researching highly toxic and hazardous materials.

The building will also house the administrative offices, clearinghouse, library and computer facilities of the Illinois Department of Energy and Natural Resources' (ENR) Hazardous Waste Research and Information Center.

"This new facility will encourage further research aimed at reducing or eliminating the generation of hazardous waste. ENR, through the Hazardous Waste Research and Information Center, has always encouraged state and university researchers to make inroads into the area of hazardous waste research."

"This new laboratory facility will enable us to expand existing research horizons and further encourage research by scientists in the private sector by making lab space available for their studies in the field of hazardous waste minimization technologies," said David L. Thomas, director of the Hazardous Waste Research and Information Center.

Initial construction on the project, funded through the state's Capital Development Fund, is expected to start soon.

Liquor licenses may be lost by non-taxpayers

Twenty-three business owners have been told they are in immediate danger of losing their state liquor licenses because they haven't paid state taxes.

Among them is Keith A. Hendricks, operator of the Stage Door, 403 S. 11th St., East St. Louis.

The action was taken at a hearing Aug. 10 of the Illinois Liquor Control Commission.

"This is just one of many ways the Illinois Department of Revenue cooperates with other state agencies to collect overdue taxes," said Revenue Director Roger Sweet.

"A business can't sell liquor without a state license. When that license is threatened, most business owners pay their delinquent taxes promptly."

A business must close its doors within 25 calendar days of receiving the official notification of the license revocation. The business may appeal the revocation within that period.

Also, when a state liquor license is revoked, no other business can get a state liquor license to operate at that address for one year.

"If a business pays its delinquent taxes within the 25 days, it will be allowed to keep its license."

"We want to collect taxes, not put people out of business," Sweet said. "But we also have to be fair to the other business owners. They face unfair competition from competitors who aren't paying all their taxes."

Three being mentioned for St. Clair board chairmanship

By Rick Arnold
Staff affiliate

BELLEVILLE — In the wake of Jerry Costello's election to Congress, St. Clair County Board members have begun jockeying for position in the race for a successor to the County Board chairman.

On the inside track is longtime Centerville Township Supervisor and County Board member Francis Touchette.

Other board members mentioned include Frank Boyne and Thomas Holbrook, both Democrats who represent Belleville districts. But a sampling of county board members indicates Touchette is the odds-on favorite.

"If I were a betting man, I would bet on Francis," said board member Wade Brunsman, D-Swansea.

Even Holbrook admitted his chances are not good.

"I'd be very interested in it (the chairman's position) but realistically, this is not going to be attainable," Holbrook said.

He stopped short, though, of endorsing Touchette.

"I'll cross that bridge when I come to it," he said.

Boyne, who has taken an active role in the passage of county ordinances on landfills, mobile homes and obscene materials, could not be reached for comment.

Costello resigned as board chairman Thursday shortly before being sworn in to Congress. Costello was on a vacation with his family over the weekend and could not be reached for comment.

The board will hold a special meeting at 7:30 p.m. Aug. 22 to elect a new chairman, who will fill the remainder of Costello's term, expiring in November 1990. A simple majority of the 29 board members is needed to elect a chairman.

Touchette, 75, a fixture in the Democratic Party for 50 years, said Thursday he definitely is interested in becoming chairman and added that he would gladly accept the position if elected.

"I'm primarily interested in continuing operating the good record of county government," Touchette said.

He would not comment on whether he would support any other board member as chairman.

Touchette, who has served as interim chairman on two previous occasions, said he does not believe a pending lawsuit against him regarding the alleged coercion of campaign contributions from his office workers will hamper his chances of being elected.

"The lawsuit is in court now. I'm anxious to vindicate myself," Touchette said.

He also said his age is not a factor.

"I'm in good physical shape. I could pass a physical any time," Touchette said. "I'm at my job every day. I work 15 hours instead of eight."

County Board member Frank Heiligenstein, D-Freeburg, said Thursday he believes Touchette's age and experience would be a plus.

"With the appointment of Touchette, there won't be as much quarreling or bickering," Heiligenstein said. "Francis can guide this ship into calm waters."

Heiligenstein, who said he is not interested in becoming chairman, said Touchette is the only realistic choice since no other Democratic board member would be able to garner a majority of votes, and the seven Republican board members have no chance of getting elected.

County Board member Richard

Bossler, R-Mascoutah, agreed that the Republican board members have no chance of being elected chairman, but said their votes are still important.

"I haven't made up my mind," Bossler said. "I'd want to see what committees I'd be put on."

Bossler said he would like to see more Republicans appointed as chairmen or co-chairmen of the County Board committees. He said he would consider voting for Touchette.

County Board member Richard "RJ" Krause, D-East St. Louis, said he would probably vote for Touchette but said he could think of one other board member who could do a better job as chairman: himself.

"I would be the perfect candidate," Krause said. "I represent all of the people in St. Clair County, not just the people in East St. Louis or the people in Belleville."

Krause said, however, that he is not actively seeking the spot. He said he would like to see the new chairman make an effort to provide more county jobs for East St. Louis residents.

Touchette's concern for East St. Louis residents makes him the best candidate for County Board chairman, said board member Will McLaughy, D-East St. Louis.

Board members Bob Glenn, R-Belleville, and David Hickey, D-Belleville, both declined comment on who they would support as Costello's replacement.

Board member Dr. Robert Roylance, R-O'Fallon, also said he was undecided, though he added he might be interested in the position.

Congressman to push for new Clark Bridge

P-RJ Washington bureau

WASHINGTON — Commuters may want to hear that Jerry Costello's first act as a congressman Thursday had a direct bearing on their driving happiness.

Seconds after meeting with House Speaker Jim Wright, the Belleville Democrat whipped out a ballpoint pen and signed a letter to the Federal Highway Administration asking for federal money to replace the Clark Bridge, which links Alton with northern St. Louis County.

"That's a project I will work on," said Costello, who took office Thursday as the new representative of the Illinois 21st District.

He co-signed the letter with Sens. Alan Dixon and Paul Simon, Illinois Democrats, and Rep. Richard Durbin, D-Ill. 20th.

In the letter, the lawmakers asked Federal Highway Administrator Robert E. Harris to approve $3.9 million for road access and railroad relocation on the Illinois side as a first step toward funding the $74 million bridge project. A new bridge is proposed to replace the present old and inadequate bridge.

"Funds are urgently needed for the replacement of the existing structure, which is a crucial link to the regional transportation system," Costello and the other Illinois lawmakers wrote.

"The Clark Bridge project is essential for the future economic health of the City of Alton and enjoys very strong support," the letter added.

Illinois officials said last month that Missouri is close to applying for $74 million in federal transportation funds.

Missouri would apply under the discretionary budget of the federal Highway and Bridge Replacement and Rehabilitation Program, a highly competitive program whose funds are administered by the secretary of Transportation. Both U.S. senators from Missouri are Republicans.

Last year, Congress approved $225 million for the discretionary budget but the Department of Transportation received applications with funding requests totaling $3 billion.

Alton area officials have been pushing to replace the existing Clark bridge, a narrow, 60-year-old span that carries 13,000 vehicles a day.

They say the bridge is dangerous, with 73 accidents reported from the Alton side between 1984 and 1986 in 17 times the state-wide average.

care of Jason. The friendship deteriorated because she felt she was being "used" by Tammy Robertson, she said.

"Tammy uses people to her own advantage. She uses people to extremes, just like she's using her son."

Perkins said she believes Tammy Robertson has used money donated to her for Jason to buy such things as fur coats, new clothes, new furniture and a swimming pool. Tammy Robertson, who often wears T-shirts and whose family truck is in poor repair, has denied allegations that the family of four is doing well on donations.

Like Rigby, Perkins said Tammy Robertson exaggerated the incident involving the crowd in front of the Robertsons' house.

"The neighbors in our neighborhood are not violent people. We did not harass her, not under any circumstances."

Perkins, who does not have children, was among those picketing in front of Prather on May 5 when Jason returned to school, taught privately in a trailer near the school for six months.

"I have nothing against that boy," Perkins said. "When we were doing the picketing I was down there wearing green gloves because that's what Tammy told me she had to use around Jason. I was just making a statement."

Tammy Robertson has stated that, on medical advice, she uses gloves whenever injecting her son with blood products.

Perkins said she doesn't think there was an organized group of people trying to drive the Robertsons away.

"If there was a vigilante group they would have contacted me," she said.

Most people on Ohio Avenue didn't want to talk about the Robertsons on Monday, but they felt comfortable since talking to Tammy Robertson.

"We talked to her about the whole thing, and she explained it — what happened, how you get AIDS, how Jason got it," the man said. "She never said then we'd have no problem with them."

The man then asked that his name not be published.

"We've got enough trouble around here already," he said.

At the end of the street, in a house that is an eight of Prather, Carol Miffin sat on a sofa in her living room as she watched the evening news.

At the other end of the small room, her husband of five months, Jack Miffin, straddled a dining room chair backwards, resting his arms on the chair's back.

"The easiest way to sum the whole thing up is one word: 'trauma,'" Jack Miffin said.

He scoffed at those who said Tammy Robertson uses the issue to get media attention.

"The only reason she went public with this was to educate the people about the actual situation, instead of all these theories and bugaboos," he said.

"Well, the bugaboos won." The Miffins disagreed about whether or not moving away was the wisest thing for the Robertsons to do.

"To me this is not going to solve the situation," Carol Miffin said. "She's in a situation where she's getting watched no matter what she does."

Her husband said: "I would have made the same decision. With all those phone calls and threats and everything else we've heard about, it was the only decision."

Jack Miffin lit another cigarette. He said he realized that a small group of individuals caused problems for the Robertsons, and that most of Granite City was supportive.

"It's a minority, of course. But the minority is enough to cause a big enough problem that it might as well be everybody."

"It makes me very angry. This whole thing is grossly unfair," he said.

Carol Miffin watched the television intensely as her daughter, Tammy Robertson, told a group of reporters that she wouldn't be coming back to Granite City.

"They've lived there all their married life," Carol Miffin said softly. "She was silent."

Jack Miffin watched images of himself flicker across the TV screen — images of him and his stepdaughter walking Jason to school two days after Tammy Robertson won a court battle earning her boy that right.

"She lost," he said. "She lost, and the fears won. People around here held their fears over-whelm everything."

exactly buy it." Lending some substance to Weber's remarks was a New Orleans Times-Picayune poll showing Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., and former Sen. Howard H. Baker of Tennessee respectively as the top two choices among the nation's voters. Dole, President Gerald Ford's running mate in 1976, lost in the primaries this year to Bush. Baker weighed his own race but aborted any try when he became White House chief of staff.

Robertsons Neighbors mixed on family's leaving

"I'm gonna be on (Channel) 2 tonight," she said.

Rigby said she and Tammy were not friends, but that she neither harmed nor threatened the family.

"If they was driven out of here, it was not by the 2400 block of Ohio Avenue," she said. She added that she felt the family's problems were brought on by Tammy Robertson.

"She shoulda just kept her mouth shut," she said.

Rigby said Tammy Robertson's report of an angry mob gathered in front of her home in March was inaccurate. The incident took place after a meeting at which Prather School parents were told a federal court might order the school district to accept Jason into a regular classroom at the school.

"I was at that meeting, and I was walking up this street after it was over and there were police cars everywhere, and a whole group of us stopped at that tree over there in front of (the Robertsons' house).

"We didn't say anything, but the next day it was in the news that we were yelling and threatening her. We never did that."

Rigby concluded, "I think she just liked all the attention she was getting," then went inside to watch the evening news.

Verla Rainey, who lives across the street from Rigby, said she felt sorry for the Robertsons.

"You don't tell people how to live and what to do," she said, standing in the doorway of her large trailer. "You don't bother people. I don't believe in bothering people."

Rainey used to babysit Jason when the boy was an infant.

"I feel sorry for the little boy because he's got something he can't help. And I feel sorry for them, the family. I wouldn't want nobody drivin' me outta my own home."

"If they wanna come back then they're welcome by me."

Alice Perkins lives on the other side of the street, in a house next door to Rigby's trailer. For a long time, she said, she and Tammy Robertson were best friends. They're not anymore.

"As far as my leaving Granite City, I am very pleased," Perkins said.

Perkins also used to help take

No more 'Las Vegas nights' after Sept. 1

By Scott Cousins
Staff affiliate

It used to be that no homecoming, county fair or similar event would be complete without poker, roulette or other games of chance.

Unfortunately for fundraisers and would-be gamblers, these games of chance have already been curtailed and after Sept. 1 will be eliminated.

Gary Schechter, of the Illinois Department of Revenue's Bingo and Charitable Games Division, said that although many, if not most, fairs and homecomings offered these kinds of activities at one time, the games are currently illegal without a proper license.

He added that the law allowing the licenses, the Illinois Charitable Games Act, expires Sept. 1. That act was intended to cover "Las Vegas night" activities such as poker, blackjack and roulette.

Only non-profit organizations could apply for licenses under the act.

Although the games have always been quite popular, Schechter said, until the Charitable Games Act was passed in 1986 they were completely illegal in Illinois.

Law enforcement agencies tended to "look the other way" because of the charitable aspects of the gambling.

Schechter said that, in many cases, local law enforcement officers were actually members of organizations holding the games, which would bring in large amounts of revenue for good causes.

After the Charitable Games Act took effect in 1986, enforcement was stepped up and many local groups were forced to stop the games.

"Last year we had to change a lot of our games," Marvin Brusatti, who was chairman of this year's Maryville homecoming, said. "We couldn't even use a roulette wheel for our cake walk."

The changes resulted in less money for the organizations sponsoring the events. In both Maryville and Caseyville, that was the volunteer fire department.

"Last year we had quite a bit less; we were down 50 percent on our games," Brusatti said. "You just don't have the volume of people."

Ray Stephens, chairman of Caseyville firemen's picnic since it began in 1947, said the stricter enforcement cost the organization about $7,000 last year.

"Those games are our big income producers," he said. "It violated the law, but it was always there. As long as I can remember, we were running these games."

Schechter said any extension or modification of the law would probably wait at least until November, when the state Legislature is in session again.

Rep. Ron Stephens, R-Troy, said he knows of no bills or amendments dealing with the Charitable Games Act currently before the governor.

Stephens said that although the state must try to prevent professional gambling operations, non-profit organizations in his opinion should be allowed to use the games to raise funds.

Lions test for glaucoma and diabetes

For years, Ellen Curtis, a resident of a North Chicago suburb, had been walking around with glaucoma, a sneaky, symptomless eye condition which, if neglected, can lead to serious eye problems — even blindness.

One day she noticed a local newspaper story about the Lions Mobile Glaucoma Screening Unit being in her area and testing local residents.

On a lark, she went through the unit and, to her amazement, learned she was a glaucoma "suspect."

A subsequent visit to her ophthalmologist confirmed she did have glaucoma. Today, Ellen is under treatment and her condition has been halted before it could do any serious damage.

Ellen's is but one of several thousand cases of glaucoma uncovered by the Mobile Glaucoma Unit, cases which might not otherwise have been found.

To many Illinois residents, the Glaucoma Unit is a symbol of Lions service. Since 1969 it has traveled hundreds of thousands of miles and screened more than a half-million Illinois residents.

In recent years the Lions have expanded the program to include screening for hypertension (high blood pressure) and the complications of diabetes which can damage the eyesight, as well as glaucoma.

All three diseases are among the leading causes of eye problems in adults. All three, if neglected, can cause serious eye problems and even blindness.

That was the primary reason Lions undertook the screening program in 1969, said Ray Franson, president of the Chapter of the Lions of Illinois Foundation, the charitable and philanthropic affiliate of the state's more than 850 Lions and Lioness clubs.

Money to finance the unit and all Lions humanitarian service programs comes from Candy Day, to be held this year on Oct. 14. On Candy Day, more than 30,000 Lions and Lionesses, aided by thousands of volunteers, hope to raise more than $1.4 million.

Screenings are offered through the host Lions Club with the cooperation of volunteers, nurses and a licensed medical doctor (ophthalmologist) provided by the University of Illinois.

"While we have over the years added to our program of service in support of the blind, deaf and the public at large, all the programs we offer, none is more critical than the Lions Mobile Screening Unit," said Franson.

The screening is quick and painless. Franson noted. In the glaucoma screening, a doctor administers anesthetic, which does not dilate the pupils. Using a tonometer to measure the eye pressure within the eyeball, the doctor can quickly tell if the person is a glaucoma suspect or not.

For information about the Glaucoma Screening Program or its companion unit, the Mobile Hearing Unit, which tests for hearing problems, contact the Lions of Illinois Foundation, 7321 W. Lake St., River Forest, Ill. 60325, (312) 771-5800.

Arts grants awarded to Metro Link

The Bi-State Development Agency has received three grants totaling $46,000 for the Metro Link Arts in Transit project.

"The funds will be used to support the involvement of artists as equal partners with architects and engineers on the design of Metro Link," the light rail transportation system proposed for the St. Louis region, said R. Raleigh D'Adamo, Bi-State executive director.

The National Endowment for the Arts and the St. Louis Regional Arts Commission each awarded Bi-State $20,000. The Missouri Arts Council gave a grant of $6,000.

Six artists, including two from St. Louis, will work with architects and engineers during the design stage. They are Leila Daw and Michael Jantzen of St. Louis, Alice Adams, Gary Burnley and Jody Pinto, all of New York City, and Anna Murch of San Francisco.

Metro Link is the first rapid-transit passenger project on which artists will be part of the initial design team.

Dutch Treat

THIS BUILD-IT-YOURSELF dutch windmill adds a charming touch to any yard. It stands 53-inches high from the base to the tip of the uppermost blade, but is not so heavy you can't move it aside when moving the lawn. The turret is mounted on a lazy-susan bearing so the rotating blades always face into the breeze. This authentic reproduction even includes details such as doors and windows. Construction plans include instructions, photos and a full-size pattern. To obtain "Dutch Windmill Pattern 397," send $4.50 to Steve Ellingson, c/o St. Louis News Service, P.O. Box 2383, Van Nuys, Calif. 91409-2383. Also available is a larger version that stands 9 feet high and 5 feet wide. The plan is $5.

Few plants immune to aphids

Aphids, often called plant lice, are tiny, soft-bodied insects that can be a problem for almost any type of plant—houseplants, flowers, vegetables, trees, shrubs—any plant aphids would probably consider it a good meal.

Aphids are no more than 1/8-inch long, and may be black, green or white. The white form is referred to as a woolly aphid because it is covered with a white or gray waxy coating that looks like wool or cotton. If the thread (that is, the coating) were to be removed, which sometimes happens when it rains, you would see a dark, soft-bodied insect about an 1/8-inch long. The woolly aphid shows up in clusters on woody plants such as pine trees and hemlocks.

Some aphids spend their entire lives on one plant, while others will move around to various plants. Many generations may be produced through the summer. Some aphids are born with wings so they can spread to other plants. In the fall, eggs are laid that will survive the winter and these hatch as soon as the weather warms up.

Aphids sometimes are not noticed until infestations have become quite heavy. Often the gardener first becomes aware of their presence when leaves start to curl up because the insects have sucked juices from the plant.

When applying control, careful spraying is needed to make sure the spray gets under the leaf. Or, a systemic spray such as Ixtox of Orthene may be used. Always read label directions and any warnings carefully. Also make sure your plant is listed as one of those the product may be used on.

Aphids may continue to reinfest the garden because infected plants may be located nearby so spray as needed. Because of their protective coating, woolly aphids call for special control measures. Use a systemic spray and a pressure-type sprayer or call in a commercial sprayer for the job.

Bruce Willis: 'I am not a wild man'

By Harry Hamm
Staff affiliate

Television and film personality Bruce Willis says so many untruths are written about him in the press that there are times when he is tempted to punch out the next journalist he sees.

"Yes, in my heart of hearts that's the way I really feel about it," Willis said. "The first couple of years I was in Hollywood, I didn't know how to handle it. When you first become a public figure, nobody gives lessons on how to handle the media. Nobody tells you the way you're supposed to act. But I think I now know how to handle it. I just don't take myself that seriously anymore. People are going to write what they want, regardless of what I say. It's just part of the business, part of being in the public spotlight."

"It sells a lot more magazines to call me a wild man than to write that Bruce Willis didn't do anything last week. And the press is in the business of selling what they write. I am not a wild man. I do like to have fun. I enjoy laughing out loud. I like to play my music loud. Nobody has ever told me that's against the law if you have a hit television show."

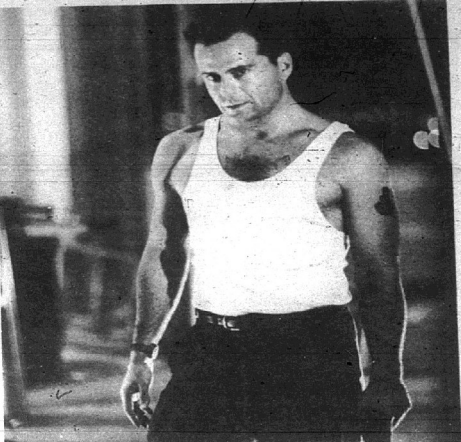

"But I guess critics get paid for criticizing, right? But in my case, it's not just my work. It's also my personal life."

Although he was born in Germany, while his father was in the Army, Willis grew up in Carey's Point, N.J., in a working-class neighborhood. The acting bug bit the 33-year-old performer at an early age. Willis followed through by majoring in drama at Montclair State College in New Jersey, where he remembered as being a good student who cut a lot of classes so he could audition for off-Broadway shows.

While on his way to Los Angeles in 1984 to see the Olympics, Willis' agent talked him into auditioning for a new television series. The show was "Moonlighting" and the rest is history.

Willis has made two feature films. The first, "Blind Date," co-starring Kim Basinger, was a hit. The second, "Die Hard," costarring Willis and Mel Gibson, was a flop.

Willis' third major feature is "Die Hard," a police-versus-terrorists action film set in a high-rise building in Los

BRUCE WILLIS IS New York City detective John McClane, the only hope for hostages trapped in 'Die Hard.'

Angeles. It has good humor, strong casting, outstanding stunts and special effects and excellent box-office prospects. Willis met his wife, actress Demi Moore, just prior to the start of shooting on "Die Hard." The two were eventually married on the set of the film after a whirlwind courtship.

Moore is now pregnant with their first child who is due in about four weeks. Willis said that if the child is a boy, he will name him King. Willis hasn't revealed what he will name the child if it is a girl.

"I wanted to tell a story about an ordinary guy," Willis said of his character in "Die Hard."

"He is not a superhero. He is not invincible. I chose to play him with a lot of fear and anxiety about whether or not he is going to live."

"I wanted to find out what really happens when your life is threatened. What do you feel like when you're about to step out into a 40-story air shaft? What goes on in your mind when there is a real possibility you could die? I look at it as a personal challenge in "Die Hard" to make those moments real."

In addition to his acceptance in "Moonlighting" and the demand for his talents in the field of commercials, Willis reportedly commanded a $4 million dollar price tag for his work in "Die Hard." Willis considers such success both a blessing and a curse.

"I became an actor because I love to act," Willis said. "I didn't become an actor because I wanted to be a celebrity or go on talk shows or endorse wine coolers. I don't feel comfortable talking about myself in the third person. I don't feel like I want to open up my private life and tell what I do when I get home. I guess it is a necessary part of the business and I do it because it is required of me. Also, in the case of "Die Hard," I was so excited about my work that I felt like talking about it. But overall, if I had a choice, I'd never talk to the press."

Willis is leaving for Kentucky in a few weeks for a small role as a Vietnam veteran in the Norman Jewison film, "In Country." He said his first child may be born in Kentucky because he is planning on bringing his wife with him.

Willis' contract with the producers of "Moonlighting" runs through this season and one more. After that, Willis hints that he wants to take a long vacation and then do some more movies.

"Television is a very limiting format," Willis said. "After four years on the same show, there's not a whole lot left to explore."

Evolution of 20th century art displayed

There is a definite old-world bias in this assemblage. Most of its work from the early part of the 20th century is European. Works from the great New York Armory Show, and many of the new directions in art spawned by that show, are not found.

Nevertheless, working with what has to rank as one of the world's great private art collections, Shapiro and Bosron have put together a terrific exhibit. They show it so as to make some very interesting and valid observations about the aesthetic evolution of our century. What's missing is not terribly consequential within this context. This exhibit should not be missed.

"Modern Art From the Puffert Collection: 50 Years of Connoisseurship" will be shown through Aug. 28 in the Special Exhibition Gallery. Admission is $3 for adults.

Museum hours are 1:30 to 8:30 p.m. Tuesday and 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Wednesday through Sunday. Those who wish more information may call (212) 906-067.

Gourmet rice meal that's light enough to carry on hikes

By Janice Denham
Food editor

The next time someone issues an abrupt invitation to "take a hike," not only take him up on it, but invite him along and offer to fix a gourmet meal.

Remember how good rice and a can of soup tasted after a day outdoors when you were a Scout? And was there ever a dessert that could compare with apple cobbler baked over an open fire?

Matt Madden of the Alpine Shop in Webster Groves, Mo., says, "Almost anything tastes good when you're hungry. But freeze-dried or dehydrated food tastes better than ever now. Many of the products tend to be entrees for two people in the $4 to $6 range."

For breakfast there are eggs, pancake mixes or mountain mush from which to choose. For dinner the entree might be something as tantalizing as teriyaki beef, cheese florentine, sweet and sour chicken, shrimp Alfredo or pasta roma. There are all kinds of side dishes, too, such as a vegetable mix or potatoes with chives.

Bill Hunter, manager of Backwoods in Belleville Plaza, says, "Weight is the all-important factor when packing." He advises that this should be the primary consideration when planning a trail event because everything has to be carried in. Rehydrated food, which already has liquid in it, adds unnecessary weight.

Ideal foods, many of them available in an everyday supermarket, are ones which are completely seasoned and need only to be mixed with boiling water or simmered a short time to reconstitute them. Stores that deal in outfitting backpackers point out that the foods they carry have changed over the years to be more flavorful and also rely on more natural ingredients with little or no preservatives in them.

Ralph Copp, general manager of The Summit in Creve Coeur, Mo., says that while winter packers may want to put more emphasis on taking along high-carbohydrate foods, a summer-time hiker needs to pay particular attention to having enough liquids.

"Usually you don't want to carry in too much water because of the weight. A quart to a quart-and-a-half usually does them and then they carry a 1- to 2-gallon collapsible bottle for where they establish camp," he says.

Water, particularly in the north and west, can be sneakily harmful to the digestive system, so it is necessary to treat water before it is used. While purification tablets are fine for a short trip, their drawbacks, according to Madden, are that they take 20 to 30 minutes to kill bacteria and leave an aftertaste. The new route to take is a compact filtering system that can clean a quart of water in only a couple minutes. Copp says The Summit's assortment of filters is priced from $50 to $187.

He adds that many forest areas and national park lands do not allow fires because of the danger of burning the land and a potential that decaying timber will be used up and, along with it, the topsoil needed to replenish forests. A backpacking stove becomes necessary then. These cost between $25 and $60 at The Summit and offer a bonus of being clean, efficient and dependable even if it rains.

Of course, keeping foods at a temperature where they can be eaten safely is not necessary with well-sealed dehydrated foods. There are some people, however, who prefer to make day trips from a camp based closer to civilization. The shop keepers advise taking all precautions possible. While there are improvements in the way of improvements in the way of syn-

FOOD TASTES BETTER when it comes to a person who has earned it. Hiking or camping on a trail does not mean leaving behind all the comforts of home. Dehydrated foods and cooking aids help the cook make light work of the job.

Stew cooked over open fire rewards day of outdoor ease

As campers head back to their tent or camper after a full day of hiking, biking, fishing or enjoying the outdoors, their thoughts are on two things—food and relaxing in front of a campfire. A camper, however, still faces the challenge of cooking a great-tasting meal with a minimum of supplies.

Here are some hints for planning camping meals.

•Plan meals with simple, one-dish recipes.

•Select foods that are the least likely to spoil, like canned goods and pre-packaged mixes. Pack a can opener.

•Pack and label premeasured foods in sealable plastic bags or containers.

•Purchase perishable foods near the campsite.

One easy camping meal is No-Measure Camper's Beef Stew. Simmer pieces of beef for stew, a can of whole tomatoes and an envelope of Italian-flavored salad dressing mix over an open fire or on a camp stove about an hour. Then add fresh vegetable pieces to the same cooking pot at various stages during the second hour of cooking.

To complete the meal, just add bread, supply an assortment of fresh fruit or open a can of chilled applesauce, and add a beverage.

thletic life that eliminates the need for replenishing fresh ice and large coolers that can be maintained electrically or by battery in an RV or at a campsite, it is still advisable in most situations to use up perishable foods the first day or two of an outing.

GORP—Good Old Raisins and Peanuts—remains a favorite trail snack. It is lightweight, can be purchased in supermarkets under the name California mix, is amenable to variations with other dried foods, is high in carbohydrates for quick energy and keeps indefinitely.

Below is a recipe for Rice Trail Mix that includes puffed rice, a lightweight bonus, as well as other tips from the backpacking pros for a more palatable trail trip.

•Count on using two quarts of water daily for each person.

•Think about the basic food groups when planning a packing

CAMP COOKING is simple when No-Measure Camper's Beef Stew heads the menu.

- 1 broken up envelope Italian salad dressing mix
- 2 large carrots, cut in ½ inch pieces
- 3 small onions
- 3 new potatoes, quartered

Combine beef pieces, tomatoes and salad dressing mix in Dutch oven. Cover tightly. Simmer 1 hour over medium coals or on camp stove.

Add carrots. Continue cooking, covered, 30 minutes.

Add onions and potatoes. Continue cooking, covered, 30 minutes or until beef and vegetables are tender.

Makes 6 servings; 318 calories, 29 gm. protein, 13 gm. fat, 20 gm. carbohydrate, 646 mg. sodium, 90 mg. cholesterol each.

Rice trail mix

- 2 cups bite-size crispy rice and corn squares
- 2 cups bite-size crispy rice squares
- 1 cup raisins
- 1 cup dried banana chips
- 1 cup dry roasted peanuts
- 1 cup chocolate candies

Combine all cereals, raisins, banana chips, peanuts and chocolate candies.

Store in tightly covered container. Makes 10 cups; 153 calories, 3.3 gm. protein, 5.5 gm. fat, 24.7 gm. carbohydrate, 83 mg. sodium and 1 mg. cholesterol per ½-cup serving.

Colorful fruit, cabbage add full flavor to healthy salad

Eating right is not always easy. The talk abounds that vegetables are healthy foods but when the weather is warm and hunger is high for something light, delicious and refreshing, healthful vegetables like those in the cabbage family are not always the first to come to mind.

Fabulous Fruited Coleslaw is a perfect example. Its pretty palette of colors—greens, purple and orange—are lightly dressed with a flavorful, creamy dressing.

- 2 tsp. cornstarch
- 1 tsp. Dijon mustard
- ¼ tsp. celery seed
- ¼ cup sour-half-and-half
- 4 cups shredded green cabbage
- 1 cup shredded red cabbage
- ¼ cup grated carrot
- ¼ cup thinly sliced green onion

Drain fruit, reserving liquid. Whisk cornstarch into reserved liquid in small saucepan. Cook over medium heat until mixture boils and thickens. Stir in mustard and celery seed.

Remove from heat. Stir in sour half-and-half. Cool.

In large bowl, toss green cabbage, red cabbage, carrot and green onion with dressing. Gently fold in fruit to serve.

Makes 6 servings, 85 calories each.

Board unhappy over minimum pay proposal from Farmer

By Rick Arnold
Staff affiliate

BELLEVILLE — A proposal by a Belleville Area College board to raise the salaries of college personnel earning the minimum wage met with sharp criticism from the trustees and college President Dr. Joe Cipri at the board's Aug. 10 session.

Trustee Fred Farmer said he wants to raise by 75 cents the salary of student workers and part-time workers earning the minimum hourly wage of $3.35.

Farmer said student and part-time employees are "a group with no representation" who simply get the grounds that we leave after paying everyone else.

He said the item will stay on the agenda for the Aug. 17 board meeting, it is likely the plan will be soundly defeated, a discussion indicated.

Farmer said his plan would cost between $120,000 and $125,000, based on the figures of 501 student workers and 84 part-time workers.

Cipri said those employment figures are only for the month of May 1988.

Cipri bristled at Farmer's suggestion that part-time and student workers were not paid enough because top college administrators and faculty members were paid too much.

"You might be right that some people are being paid $20,000 too much, but I can also tell you that we are paying $20,000 too short," Cipri said.

He told Farmer that "the day you think you are paying me too much, you can ask me to leave."

Cipri said he wished that all college employees who deserved a pay raise could get one but said that was just not possible given the college's financial situation.

Farmer also drew the ire of Leo Welch, president of the college's faculty union, when he referred to the organization as a "quasi-union."

Farmer made the remark in speaking about what he perceived as the union's disregard for the college's part-time faculty.

"I think your remark was inappropriate," Welch said, adding that the college chapter of the American Association of University Professors has been fully accredited and that the union has received a national award for its efforts in improving the quality of higher education.

"If you would like to incorporate the part-time faculty into the collective bargaining process, we will be more than happy to do so," Welch told Farmer. "I will stand on my record of equity and equality."

Trustee Larry Reinneke said he questioned Farmer's assertion that it was demeaning for the union to work for a minimum wage.

"Sometimes you're sending the wrong message to part-time employees when you increase their wages in the same jobs," Reinneke said.

He said increasing pay without increasing responsibilities sometimes lessens a person's desire to advance in his career. "We're not going to do it unless we need to be competitive," said Reinneke, adding that he did not think it was wise to single out certain employee groups for pay raises.

Trustee Robert Dieltmann said, "I see this as an arbitrary (selection)." Dieltmann said, "We're not going to do it unless we need to be competitive." Dieltmann said, "We're not going to do it unless we need to be competitive."

Midnight Madness

350 nocturnal spectators show why soccer is king in Granite City

This is the city — Granite City, Ill. Monday, Aug. 15, 1988. It was hot in Granite City. Almost 90 degrees in the middle of the night. I was working the night shift out of the sports department. I had no partner. At 11 p.m. — I was called out to the field near the local high school. It seemed some 32 young men in T-shirts and shorts had appeared at the field shortly before midnight with a distinct purpose in mind. Trouble, I thought. But when I arrived, not only were there three grown men there supervising them, but 350 of the decent, hard-working people of the city were there cheering them on. Strange. What could cause this Midnight Madness in Granite City? Then it hit me. It could only be one thing...

Executive sports editor

GRANITE CITY — Soccer! Everyone has his own way of marking the change of seasons. But in Granite City, when the Warrior soccer team takes the field for its first practice, that's as good a sign as any.

That it did on Monday — as early as possible. Since Monday was the first day the IHSA allowed practice for the fall season, Gene Baker and assistants Mel Bunting and Dave Ames wasted no time. At 12:01, they called the troops to midfield at the Gauntlet for some words of instruction and it was time to go.

It was "Midnight Madness," and that's exactly what an outsider might think of the whole scene. Those not familiar with the relationship between soccer and Granite City would not understand why 350 people would pay $1 each to watch a high school team hold its first practice of the year in the middle of the night.

"That was tremendous," said Baker, starting his 16th year at Granite City. "We appreciate the support. This is more than some teams get for their games."

A lot more than just about any other soccer team around except Collinsville. And there wasn't that much to watch. The 82 Warrior hopefuls went through some conditioning and ball-handling drills. It was much the same as Baker, Bunting and Ames would do at a normal practice.

"We probably moved things along at a little quicker pace than we normally would," Baker said. "We don't learn a whole lot from the first practice. We find out who has been working and what kind of shape they're in."

In this, one of the hottest summers in recent memory, it was thought the midnight practice would give the players at least one chance to practice without the menacing presence of the sun. They accomplished that, but it wasn't exactly hot chocolate weather. It was 88 degrees when practice started and had cooled to a nippy 86 by the time the workout ended at 1:30 a.m.

"Unbelievable," said Bunting, echoing the sentiments of weather watchers everywhere this summer.

"And it's not even a cool 86," said athletic director Greg Patton as he wiped the sweat off. "It's as humid now as during the day."

The practice didn't go off without a hitch. Senior Chris Ryan, who figures to be one of the team captains, showed up with a bad ankle after injuring it in a mud volleyball game on Sunday. Junior Troy Adamitis also was slowed by an injury to a quadriceps muscle.

Those two, along with junior John VanBuskirk and senior Scott Stone, supply most of the experience from last year's state champions. Others such as seniors Brian Bjorkman, Bob Strubberg and Chris Nolan also saw varsity action.

"We've got some good young players coming in," Baker said. "There are a lot of good-looking sophomores who could make an impact."

But now the fun is over. Baker told the players the work would get more serious when the fans weren't there to watch. The Warriors were right back at it at noon on Monday and will practice at 9 a.m. and 1 p.m. each day in preparation for the season opener at Belleville Alt-hoff on Sept. 1.

But "Midnight Madness" was a pleasant diversion.

"I could think of a lot worse things these kids could be doing at this time of night," said Bunting.

Amen. And good night.

Weckman among winners at park tourney

GRANITE CITY — John Quarenghi of Collinsville won the 31st annual men's singles crown in the Granite City Park District Invitational Tennis Tournament last weekend.

Quarenghi took the title by knocking off the meet's top-seeded player, Paul Wagner of Belleville, 7-6, 6-4. It was the second straight year Wagner has finished as a runner-up. He lost the championship match to Andy Davis of Webster Groves, Mo., 1-6, 1-6.

The hardest-fought matches in men's singles were John Crewe's quarterfinal victory over Rick Cain, 6-1, 1-6, 6-3, and Wagner's 6-5, 7-5, 6-2 win over Crewe in the next round. Quarenghi's toughest match was his second-round win over Chris Grabner, 6-1, 6-4.

The men's 35 and over singles championship was won by Jim Monika when he took a hard-fought 7-5, 7-5 win over Bob Simpson. Monika was second in 1987.

Granite City's Keri Weckman lived up to her No. 1 ranking in the 16 and under girls division by turning back Melissa Croak, 6-1, 6-3. The boys 18 and under singles was captured by Steve Moehn when he whipped Chris

Trittschuh, national team keep Cup hopes afloat with 5-1 win

What? That collective sigh of relief comes courtesy of United States National soccer coach Lofar Osiander and his players, who beat Jamaica 5-1 in a World Cup qualifying game Saturday at the St. Louis Soccer Park.

Osiander said at a press conference last Wednesday that a U.S. loss to Jamaica would put the American program back two or three years.

After Saturday's game, he could one-touch that grim comment aside and relax.

"This means we can continue for another year of solid international competition and gives us confidence," he said.

A round-robin tournament in 1989 will decide which two teams will represent the North and Central American and Caribbean region in Italy.

Besides the United States, other contenders for the 1990 World Cup are two-game series winners between Netherlands Antilles-El Salvador, Trinidad and Tobago-Honduras, Costa Rica-Panama and Guatemala-Cuba.

The United States hasn't qualified for the World Cup since 1956, when it went to Brazil and beat England 1-0 in one of soccer's all-time upsets.

Increasing success and momentum for the U.S. program, combined with Osiander's role as host for the 1994 games, is responsible for added attention and pressure on the Americans.

"The world will be looking out for the United States," said midfielder Brian Kilob, who scored the game's first goal Saturday. "We're up and coming. Maybe before we weren't experienced enough to win. Now people are looking at us to be the dominant team in our region."

The United States—with Granite City's Steve Trittschuh starting at fullback and Jamaica were counting on a 0-0 tie July 24 in Kingston. The match was marked by hot, muggy weather and a field that the American players complained was about as smooth as Fred Flinstone's living room.

It was horrible. Bliss said, "It didn't let you work the ball on the ground, which is how we like to play."

The tie game in Jamaica meant the United States had to win Saturday to advance in Cup competition since road goals count double. That increased the tension for the U.S. team, because although the final score Saturday spelled blowout, the game actually was more of a squeaker with a star-spangled finale for the Americans.

It wasn't until the 68th minute that the United States broke a 1-1 tie and took the lead for good on a Hugo Perez penalty kick that the sellout crowd of 8,100 mostly American fans cheered wildly.

Frank Klopas added a goal in the 76th minute and Paul Krumpke scored a 78-minute mark, both assisted by Bruce Murray, to give the U.S. some cushion.

Klopas, a veteran of the Chicago Sting, added a second goal in the 85th minute on a pass from Krumpke to finish the day's scoring.

A U.S. team hadn't scored as many goals since it beat Bermuda 6-2 in a World Cup qualifying game in 1968 in Kansas City.

The offensive output was even more surprising considering high-scoring Brent Goulet missed the game due to a bad knee and Perez could only play half the game because of a foot injury.

Osiander certainly didn't expect it.

"No way did I think five goals," he said. "I counted on two and I was hoping for three."

Jamaica's lone goal came on a free kick from Winston Anglin to Alton Sterling, who drove the ball past the U.S. wall and goalkeeper David Vanole in the 54th minute. The small Jamaican contingency erupted by unfurling a large flag and throwing miniature flags throughout the stands.

Although Osiander didn't comment on the celebration, he made it clear he didn't care for the goal.

"It was a dumb goal," he said. "Not that they scored, but how they scored the goal. I was disappointed."

Vanole, however, said the Jamaican goal forced the United States to play harder.

Said Osiander, "The Jamaicans could have had one more goal max. We could have had three or four."

Jamaica might debate the "could have" argument, but the United States definitely won the scoreboard argument.

"The chances we had, we put away," Klopas said. "That's what you need to win games."

And World Cups. (More on Trittschuh will appear in a later edition.)

The rainy and extremely hot weather caused many matches to be defaulted and apparently resulted in a severe drop in entries. For the first time in 31 years, the meet failed to attract enough entries for women's singles competition.
